LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To our local law enforcement officers:

I would like to take this opportunity to express my family's sincere appreciation to the men and women of the Whitehouse Police Department. Our local police department has done an outstanding job in protecting and serving our community. Recent arrests for arson, drugs and family violence are only a few ways that our police department truly makes our town a safer place to live.

During the past few months, and due to no fault of their own, some criminals chose to put our local law enforcement officers in a terrible position - to use lethal force. One needs only to look at the photographs posted online of the bullet ridden patrol cars to know that our officers had no other choice. I only wonder what these criminals would have done to their families and neighbors had our officers not responded and handled the situation.

When we see a police officer running radar, we sometimes like to assume that this is all they do. What we don't see are the officers working patrol shifts on Christmas morning, in the middle of the night and while we are at football games - protecting our homes and businesses.

As you pass one of our officers, whether they are Whitehouse, Troup, DPS or any other law enforcement officer, give them a wave, say a prayer for their safety and remember the work they do for us. Better yet, if you see them in public and have the opportunity, shake their hands and let them know in person you support them and appreciate the work they do.

Thank you Whitehouse Police Department,
Clay Alexander
A proud Whitehouse resident.

Amanda Kay Barfield

Services for Amanda Kay Barfield, 32, of Whitehouse are scheduled for 10:30 a.m., Saturday, Oct. 27 at Southern Oaks Baptist Church with Rev. Rob Phillips officiating. Prescription Medications For Hair Loss

Alopecia is the medical term for excessive hair loss from the scalp. It may be caused by genetics, medical conditions, or certain medications. The most common type of alopecia is called androgenic alopecia, or male pattern baldness, and is caused by genetics. Hair loss beginning at the temples and crown may begin in men as early as their teens. Men may then experience partial or complete baldness. Women may also experience hair thinning, however this rarely progresses to complete baldness.

Although there is no cure for baldness, treatments are available. Minoxidil (Rogaine) is available over-the-counter. This medication is a liquid that is applied to the scalp twice daily. Minoxidil works to cause hair regrowth, as well as to prevent further hair loss. Hair that is re-grown from this treatment may not be as long or thick as previous hair. New hair does not continue to grow beyond the duration of treatment with minoxidil. The treatment may cause irritation of the scalp. Finasteride (Propecia) is a medication available with a prescription to treat male pattern baldness. This medication works by inhibiting the conversion of testosterone to dihydrotestosterone, which is a hormone that plays an important role in hair loss. This medication is not approved for use in women because of its potential to cause birth defects.
